A PERSONAL INTRODUCTION

Forty Years of Building People First

Judson Tolmen is a husband of thirty years, a proud dad, and a good son who learned early that showing up for people is the whole job. A graduate of Indiana University — home of the reigning national champion Hoosier football team and a men's basketball program with multiple NCAA titles — Jud carried the IU spirit of loyalty and grit into everything that followed.

For four decades, Jud has served north central Indiana as a financial advisor and fiduciary, helping families approach retirement with confidence and clarity. As president of Tolmen Financial in Union Mills and a regional director mentoring agents across the country, he has built his career on the belief that people deserve honest guidance and multiple streams of income — including tax-free options that let them pivot when life changes.

But the title he may treasure most is “Coach.” Jud has devoted years to coaching high school football, basketball, and girls golf, dedicated to helping young people grow with strong self-esteem and the confidence to face whatever comes next. Whether he's teaching a teenager to keep her head up after a tough round or helping a couple navigate retirement, the work is the same: building people first.
